Factsheet: Property pricing and underquoting in NSW

What buyers and sellers need to know

Underquoting happens when a property is advertised or represented at a price that is lower than an agent's reasonable estimate of what it is likely to sell for. It can mislead buyers, waste buyer's time and money, and reduce confidence in the property market. If a property sells above the advertised price, this does not automatically mean underquoting. A higher sale price may be the result of strong buyer competition or changing market conditions.

FOR BUYERS

What to check

- Read this Statement of Information – it includes recent sales of similar properties in the area.
- Check if the price changes during the campaign and ask why.

Signs that may raise questions

- A price or price range is missing where one appears to be required.
- Phrases such as "offers over", "offers above" and/or similar wording or symbols are used.
- Price appears much lower than similar recent sales.
- The price changes without explanation.

Tips

- Ask questions and get the facts before you invest time and money.
- Remember, the advertised price or range is a guide, not a guarantee.

FOR SELLERS

Your agent must

- Before entering into an agency agreement with you, provide you with a reasonable estimate of the likely selling price or price range with supporting evidence. The estimated selling price must consider comparable sales and other relevant information.
- Ensure the estimated selling price remains reasonable throughout the campaign.
- Include a selling price or price range in advertisements that is not below the agent's estimated selling price in the agreement, the highest bid (not including a vendor bid) before the property was passed-in at auction and any written offers rejected by you where the only reason is that the amount was too low.
- Update or remove non-compliant advertising.

If your expectations differ from the estimate

- You can discuss pricing strategy with your real estate agent, but your instructions do not override their legal obligations.
- The advertised price cannot fall below the legal thresholds.

If market conditions change

- The estimated selling price may need to be revised and non-compliant advertising must be updated.

IF SOMETHING DOESN'T SEEM RIGHT

Ask the agent - Ask for the basis of the price or an explanation of any price change.

Keep records - Keep copies or screenshots of online listings, price changes, communications, auction results, offers and any information provided.

Report a concern- Contact NSW Fair Trading if you believe an agent may have breached the laws.
